Tony is Head of Insights Learning and Development (ILD) UK Direct Team. As a senior member of the management team he is responsible for influencing and delivering corporate strategy.

Before joining ILD he worked as an Executive Consultant with a Global Consultancy, working with clients throughout EMEA. In this role he gained an excellent reputation (held by clients and colleagues alike) as a highly skilled facilitator and deliverer of Leadership, Sales and Service practices. He has a successful track record in organisational development strategies and his experience covers both public and private sectors. He has worked at all levels in organisations, from developing strategy with Senior Managers and Executive teams to delivering management development interventions at all levels. He has acted as coach and mentor to individual clients as part of personal and organisational development programmes.

Insights Learning and Development joined forces with Project Management Institute chapters and a leading consultant in strategic execution to find out how project performance is related to the process of project selection, what project managers see as the challenges of delivering in the current environment, and the role of leadership in project performance.

The results confirmed some of what has long been suspected, and there were also a few surprises along the way.

The evening will combine a talk and then some participation exercises and is set to be a valuable learning session for all attendees.
